MANAGEMENT

If part of your power is not working...

If you have already checked your breakers (turning them off and then back on) then you will also need to check one other easy thing before submitting a maintenance request.

It is probably a GFI switch. There are usually outlets in or near bathrooms and kitchens that have a button on them. For safety, if something like water hits the outlet the button can pop out causing the power to turn off to everything attached to that power line. You just need to reset it by pushing the button back in. Look around the area for an outlet like that and push the button back in. Sometimes they can be on the opposite side of a wall too.
